

June / July 2009 Inside the Architects' Studio

Jencen Remodel Exemplifies Design Philosophy

Jencen designers understand the power of good design, which is reflected in our recent 10,000 square feet office remodelling.

Main Studio Level

To add dynamism to the studio level, the ceiling, lighting, & carpet designs are rotated from the main building axis.

Our criteria for the floor material was versatility, sustainability, & durability. InterfaceFLOR proved to be the ideal choice.

In addition to designing the carpet layout, Jencen designers also installed every square of this complex design.

Our designers realized the full potential of the InterfaceFLOR carpet tile

The design is sculptural and provides streamlined function plus storage.

First Level Administrative Center

Custom casework creates both the main entry from Euclid Avenue and the Administrative hub.

Highlights in the lounge (above) include modernist furniture, a unique tile layout, framed deco prints and soft lighting.

The exercise room & meditation areas (right) are separated by sheer curtain panels - the space can be manipulated for individual yoga or group cardio

Article by Katie Chew, Jencen Project Manager
Photographs by Kate Vernyi, Jencen Interior Designer

Work Out / Meditation Area and Employee Lounge

Jencen seized the opportunity to remake several unused rooms on the lowest level into employee amenities. Jennifer Winder, the lead designer for the project explains,

"We wanted to provide environments for employees to relax and to work out in, if desired."

Color, lighting, finishes, and furnishings create the soothing and sophisticated ambience in the lounge and meditation areas.

Both spaces have hosted office celebrations and provide an oasis for busy associates.

